

How did trade blockades in World War One cause starvation in Lebanon?

Narrated by Luis Fajardo

6. The Border today

Before the battle of Nogales, Mexicans and Americans lived side by side, unhindered by barriers. But after the shootout, one city was carved in two.

[Alberto Suarez Barnett – Nogales historian] – Before the war it was really easy to get across the border. However in 1918 they kept increasing the checkpoints, the paperwork and the fence that was getting higher and higher.

[Luis's commentary resumes] - Today there are almost two thousand miles of physical and virtual fence separating the two countries.
